ClubsHub | One-Page Business Model

A campus-wide club discovery and management platform for the University of Eastern Africa, Baraton (UEAB).

CUSTOMER AND PROBLEM

Students are the primary users. UEAB students lack one place to find clubs and often learn about them only at events, missing ways to participate. Club administrators need a simple way to reach prospective members between events. Research: 12 students interviewed. First-year status was not recorded, so no first-year claim is made.

SOLUTION AND VALUE

ClubsHub offers one searchable club directory. Students explore clubs, personalize discovery, request membership and track request status; they can also find events and announcements and propose a club. Club admins manage profiles, requests, members, events and announcements. A campus-wide directory makes clubs easier to compare and discover than separate sites or event-only awareness.

COSTS AND ADOPTION

Hosting is free at this stage. No school hosting plan or cost estimate has been agreed; the team plans to discuss hosting with the university once there is interest. To work toward the first 100 users, start with department club leaders and members. The head of department has agreed to discuss that club. Grow one club at a time; this is an approach, not a measured forecast.

WHO PAYS

The team expects the university to pay because the product serves the whole campus. This remains an expectation: neither the university nor the head of department has confirmed payment.

RISKS AND COMPLIANCE

Club-built alternatives: separate websites can fragment discovery; ClubsHub provides one directory. Adoption and stale listings: clubs must keep profiles and announcements current. Privacy and security: the service stores student names, university emails and membership request details. Server-side role checks limit students to their own requests, club admins to their club, and super admins to system-wide access. No formal compliance certification is claimed. Prior attempt: a departmental hackathon club website was not taken forward. ClubsHub targets the whole campus, while recognizing sustained participation as a risk.
